Obesity is now a major problem in many countries and can be associated with all-cause mortality and morbidity. The aim of this paper is to review the epidemiological evidence concerning the relationship between the nutritional status and cardiometabolic risk factors, i.e. hypertension, dyslipidemia and insulin resistance. It appears that the metabolic complications of obesity occur in a range of different combinations of the different components of the "triple burden of malnutrition". This leads to the question of whether we should consider these as separate categories of malnutrition.Q: Remotely trigger event with Code I have a piece of code that I use to automatically perform an action on a file using VBScript. The problem is that this code can't be used from a webpage, as it's actually running under a console that's connected to the server I want to trigger the event on. In order to keep the code secure, I want to avoid making it possible to run the script from a URL. Is there any way of doing this remotely? A: You can have the VB script output its results to the console, where it can be then accessed from a web-page. If you have a console on your server, you can connect to that and then act on the output. Here's an example: Create a batch file that runs your script: wscript.exe path-to-your-vbs-script.vbs There's a tutorial for doing this on Microsoft's website: 82157476af
